About MWCR

The Mental Wellness and Cultural Resiliency Program was designed to meet the needs of Yukon communities where there is an identified gap in mental health services, and particularly, culturally safe supports.

At its core, this work is based on the understanding that mental wellness is multi-dimensional and integral for healthy individuals and communities and families.

The primary objective of the MWCR Program is to increase capacity within the communities to respond to crisis. Citizens will be trained and supported to provide crisis response in their respective communities and no longer relying solely on external supports

The Training

Our Community Responder Training is made up of two separate weeks, with the first focusing on Kinship, Intergenerational Trauma, Self-Care, Mental Wellness, and Traditional Values.

Upon completion of the first training week, participants will be invited back for the final bit of training at a later date. This training will consist of two-day ASIST Training, discussion around Substance Use, and the Effects of Trauma.

Participants will be reimbursed with honorariums for attending this training along with travel expenses and meals covered.

Community Responders can be citizens of any of the 14 Yukon First Nations.

We are currently limited to having two responders from each community attend training. However, we will continue to offer trainings moving forward.

After The Training

Once a citizen has attended training, they will receive a program certificate and an ASIST certificate.

House of Wolf will work with the community Health and Wellness Departments in developing how the program is implemented in your community.

In the event of a crisis in your community, you may be called upon to provide support and intervention for those involved. This can look very different depending on the situation and the needs of those in crisis. You may be called to support in other communities if you have the capacity, travel will be reimbursed for this.

Community Responders are provided an honorarium for their work as part of the program, which must be coordinated through your Health and Wellness Department.
