THE OPPORTUNITY

This is an opportunity to help keep the First Nation of Na-Cho Nyäk Dun (FNNND) citizens safe, and to provide a professional, visible and proactive point of contact for citizens in crisis responding to incidents to provide support and intervention. It is all about developing and maintaining trust and positive relationships with citizens, partners and stakeholders ensuring referrals to external partners such as RCMP and other supports as appropriate, involved with investigations and enforcement. It is a chance to work harmoniously with our citizens, as well other justice-based and inter-departmental staff in a new community initiative.

THE PERSON

You are an excellent communicator and have interpersonal skills to work with a variety of individuals in establishing and maintaining positive professional relationships with staff, citizens and external partners. Your solid understanding of holistic principles and values provides patience and empathy in dealing with stressful and emotional situations in your ability to keep emotions under control and restrain negative actions when provoked, when faced with opposition or hostility from others, or when working under conditions of increasing levels of stress. You have the desire and self initiative in creating a safer community!

QUALIFICATIONS

You have Grade 12, Graduation Equivalency Diploma (GED) or equivalent and willing to participate in a Community Safety Training Program and take the necessary coursework in conflict resolution, diffusing difficult situations or similar. Knowledge of Aboriginal Peoples history with formal justice, residential and child welfare systems and familiarity with FNNND history, culture, goals and aspirations is required for success in this position.

ANNUAL SALARY RANGE: $ 65, 745.00 - $ 86, 596.00 Annually [$ 33.60 - $ 44.26 /hr]

The FNNND offers a competitive benefits package including shared pension contributions, extended health, and dental plan.
